FARM-YARD SCRAPS.

Plow deep on clay soil, fall and winter in time for it to freeze it would be better.

Do not, because some of your land is rich, neglect to manure it; this is the very land that manure pays best on; besides if you wish this land to remain rich you must manure it.

I will give you the simplest and best remedy for colic in man or Horses, I ever tried. For a horse, give a tea cup full of flour (wheat flour) in a black bottle, filled with water, dissolve the flour by shaking the bottle and drench the horse. It will generally cure in five or ten minutes. For a man, a tablespoonful of flour in a tumbler of cold water.

"My farm and its treasures I bequeath jointly to you as your only patrimony. I charge you never to sell it, for somewhere in the ground, within a foot of the surface, there are treasures buried:" Thus spoke a dying sire to his sons; they concluded he talked of money which was hidden there; so, after their father's death, with unwearied diligence they carefully dug every inch of the farm. The treasure they expected to find was not there, but the ground being well stirred and loosened, brought forth so bountifully that it proved a real treasure. Few farmers are aware that underneath their visible acres lie others equally valuable. The products and profits of the farm can be doubled by deep cultivation, judicious rotation and manuring, is unquestionable. A little farm well tilled is more pleasant and profitable than a great farm carelessly run over. Labor and industry well applied to agriculture seldom fail of reward.

HOW TO SUCCEED IN FARMING.

The Reconstructed Farmer says: In the first place you must calculate what it will cost you to run the farm and charge the farm with this amount. Then calculate what amount of the various crops the farm will produce under ordinary seasons, and then value the several amounts at a medium price and give the farm credit. If the farm should improve by your management five per cent., then you should give it credit for this, but if by bad management your farm should deteriorate five per cent. charge the farm with it.

In the second place, you should apply your mind to the farm, and endeavor to ascertain the cheapest, shortest, easiest, and most profitable mode to do any and everything pertaining to the farm, from the greatest to the smallest.

In the third place deal honestly and promptly; comply with all promises you may make and require the same from all with whom you may have to deal.

In the next place, rise early every morning and see that your stock are properly cared for, and then place yourself where your attention and labor is most needed.

While with your hands, learn how long it is required to plow and hoe a row as well as an acre, so that if you should be called off to attend to some minutiæ, then you will know whether they have worked faithfully or idled.

All farmers should endeavor to learn what is a days work, if they desire to succeed in the South under the present system of labor.

The freedmen who constitute our laborers, though ignorant as to their best interests generally, are not slow to learn whether you are a judge of a day's work or understand the best mode of management. Therefore you should by all means endeavor to acquaint yourself with the modus operandi of the farm. If you do not wish to fail of success, then by no means trust your laborers to do this, that and the other thing, if you do, oftener than otherwise a failure is as certain as day follows night.

Suppose you command when and how to feed your stock, and not attend to it in person or have some irresponsible substitute, what would be the result? Your team would be barburized and famishad up: and as for your hogs, sheep and cattle, you had as well have none, and your barn would be robbed of its contents. the tools would be scattered in every direction on the farm, and in short, everything will be in a higgledy-piggledy, as nothing will be done in order or anything in its proper place.

When we pass a man's farm, we can tell whether he is a good manager or not by looking over on the farm, for there will be a certain air of neatness about the fence and general appearance that testifies to the amount of brains and energy exercised.

No farmer can run to all the political meetings to hear the "gas bags" discharge their wind, or be at all the fox hunts and do his farm that justice which is required to succeed. Neither will it do to neglect your business to meet at some cross roads grog shop certain idlers, that exist in almost every community and there spend a portion of every week in idle gossip.

In short, the proper way to keep your mind on your business is to attend to it diligently at all times, for the devil builds his work shop in the idlers brain. In order to keep this evil one out of your mind as much as possible, you should endeavor to have your attention engaged at something "useful and beautiful."

What we have here said is equally applicable to all professions, except those who do not expect to live by honest industry.

TERRIBLE CIRCUS ACCIDENT.

Fearful and Awful Affair—Three Men Devoured Alive by Lions.

[From the Middletown (Me.) Banner.]

The unusually quiet little village of Middletown was lately thrown into a painful fever of excitement on the morning of May 12th, by an awful catastrophe, which occurred to the band lately attached to James Robinson & Co.'s circus and animal show, and led by Professor M. C. Sexton.

Upon starting out from Cincinnati for the season, the management determined to produce something novel in the way of a band chariot, and conceived on the idea of mounting the band upon the cutest den of performing Numidian lions, and which would form one of the principal and most imposing features of the show.

Although repeatedly warned by Professor Sexton that he deemed the cage insecure and dangerous in the extreme, the managers still persisted in compelling the Band to ride upon it. Nothing, however, occurred until the fatal morning of the 12th.

The Band took their places and the procession commenced to move amid the shouts of the multitude of rustics who had assembled to witness the grand pageant, and hear the enlivening strains of music. Not a thought of danger was entertained by any one, but the awful catastrophe was about to occur.

As the driver endeavored to make a turn in the streets the leaders became entangled and threw the entire team into confusion and he lost control of them, and becoming frightened they broke into a violent run. Upon the opposite side of the street the forewheel of the cage came in contact with a large rock with such force as to cause the braces and stanchions which supported the roof to give way, thereby precipitating the entire band into the awful pit below.

For an instant the vast crowd was paralyzed with fear, but for a moment only, and then arose such a shriek of agony as was never heard before. The awful groans of terfor and agony which arose from the poorvictims who were being torn, lacerated by the frightful monsters below, was heart-rending and sickening to a terrible degree.

Every moment some one of the band would extricate themselves from the debris, and leap over the sides of the cage to the ground with a wild spring and faint away upon striking the earth, so great was their terror. But human nature could not stand and see men literally devoured before their very eyes, for there were willing hearts and strong arms ready to render every assistance necessary to rescue the unfortunate victims of this shocking calamity.

A hardware store which happened to stand opposite was invaded by the request of the noble-hearted proprietor, and pitch-forks, crowbars and long bars of iron, and in fact every available weapon was brought into requisition. The side-doors of the cage were quickly torn from their fastenings, and then a horrible sight was presented to view. Mingled among the brilliant uniform of the poor unfortunates lay legs, arms, torn from their sockets and half devoured, while the savage brutes glared ferociously with their sickly green-colored eyes upon the petrified crowd. Professor Charles White arrived at this moment, and gave orders in regard to extricating the dead and wounded—he well knowing it would be a difficult and dangerous undertaking to remove them from the infuriated monsters.

Stationing men with forks and bars at every available point, he sprang fearlessly into the den amid the savage monsters, and commenced raising the wounded, and passing them upon the outside to their friends. He had succeeded in removing the wounded, and was proceeding to gather up the remains of the lifeless, when the mammoth lion, known to the showmen as old Nero, sprung with a frightful roar upon his keeper, fastening his teeth and claws in him in his neck and shoulders, lacerating him in a horrible manner. Prof. White made three herculean efforts to shake the monster off, but without avail, and gave orders to fire upon him.

The contents of four of Colt's navys were immediately poured into the carcass of the ferocious animal and he fell dead; and the brave little man, notwithstanding the fearful manner in which he was wounded, never left the cage until every vestige of the dead were carefully gathered together and placed upon a sheet, preparatory for burial. It was found that three of the ten who mounted the cage a short time before were killed outright, and four others terribly lacerated. The names of the killed are August Schoer, Conrad Freelz and Charles Greiner. Coffins were procured and an immediate burial determined upon, as the bodies were so frightfully torn and lacerated as to be unrecoguizable to their most intimate friends. It was a melancholy day for Middletown, and a sadder day for the friends and companions of the deceased.

Of all the vast multitude who started out in the morning with anticipations of a glad holiday few left for their homes with dry eyes after the triple funeral—for the entire community followed the remains to the quiet little cemetery. At midnight the carcass of the slain beast was quietly buried on the lot where was intended to be given the exhibition; but which was never accomplished. There is a terrible responsibility resting upon some one which should be thoroughly investigated and the guilty parties be brought to a quick and speedy punishment. The lions are the same ones which nearly cost Prof. Charles White his life two years ago while travelling with the Thayer and Noyes party, and were known to be a very dangerous cage of animals.

Every attention is being given to the sufferers by the kind and hospitable citizens of Middletown, and it is to be hoped they will soon recover forom their wounds, and at last accounts they were all pronounced out of danger.

Four Hundred Miles up Stairs.

"Reading about electricity, lightning, and the telegraph, the other day," said Uncle Peter, "reminded me of a curious story I once heard, when I was in England."

It seems there was a newspaper in the city of Glasgow, in Scotland, which employed a London correspondent. The correspondent made it his duty to gather the news every day and send it to Glasgow every night by telegraph.

He made arrangement with the operator at a certain office, by which news was sent to Glasgow at a reduction by the year.

One night he arrived at the lower door, at the foot of the stairs leading up into the telegraph office. The door was locked, and he could not open it.

The telegraph office was way up to the top of the building, in the sixth story. The operator had a bed there, to which he retired promptly at three o'clock, and it was now half past two.

The operator up stairs yawned and looked at his watch. "Jinkins wont come to-night," said he; "I may as well go to bed." And there was poor Jinkins all the time pounding away on the door at the foot of the long stairs, unable to get in.

"Hillo, up there!" he cried, looking at the window of the telegraph office, that glowed with light. "Hillo Jones! Jones! Somebody has locked the outside door, and I can't get in."

"What's the row?" said a policeman coming along.

"I'm locked out," said Jenkins. "Here I've got a batch of the most important news for any paper—a murder, three fires, and a riot—and the door locked in my face, and I can't get in. What will I do?"

So the policeman began banging the door, but Jones, the operator, up in his office, was as unconscious of the tumult as if it had been in the moon. He was whistling to himself and yawning prodigiously.

"Why don't you go to some hother hoffice?" asked the policeman.

"No authority to use any other line," said the correspondent. 'Ah! I've got it!' he added, and before the policeman could ask what it was, the excited Jinkins dashed off down the street as if a mad dog was after him.

Jinkins rushed breathlessly into another telegraph office, six blocks off.

'I say,' said he to the operator, 'I'm in a fix. Got news to go off inside of half an hour, and the stupid operator at my office has gone to sleep, and I can't get in—and—and—and—'

'Well, that is a fix.'

'Tell you what I want,' said Jinkins, endeavoring to catch his breath: 'I want you to telegraph down to Glasgow, and ask the operator there to telegraph up here to Jones, and bid him come down stairs and let me in."

The operator roared with laughter at this but went at once to his instrument, and began rattling away at a great rate.

This is the message he sent:

'Glasgow. Wake up Jones, Station X. Tell him Jinkins, at the foot of the stairs, can't get in.'

Jones was looking at his watch again, and concluded that he had better put out the lights and go to his little bed room across the hallway, when clatter, clatter, went his instrument.

'There's Glasgow calling me," said Jones, and hurried to his instrument and ticked off:

'What's wanting?'

Back came the answer:

'Jinkens down stairs—door fast—let him in.'

Off went Jones down stairs with a rush; and at last the anxious Jinkins got up and sent on his news.

You see how a man sent a message through a solid door, and up four pairs of stairs, four hundred miles around, and by way of Glasgow, and all within twenty minutes.

Wasn't that four hundred miles up stairs?

A Royal Family Quarrel.

The Crown Prince of Prussia, who married Victoria's eldest daughter, is not noted for his morals. The Berlin court gossips tell the following: The Crown Princess went to her jeweller to purchase a diamond necklace. She instantly selected a very beautiful one, something quite new, but noticed that the head of the establishment, who of course was serving her, tried in vain to suppress a peculiar smile, and that his clerks smiled surreptitiously also. The Princess, always excitable, flushed up, and asked haughtily if there was any reason why she should not purchase the necklace she had selected. "It already belongs to your Royal Highness," the shopkeeper was startled into replying, 'though I was not authorized to let your Royal Highness know it.' It was ordered some time ago. 'Who ordered it? the Prince? Oh! now I see—my birthday is in a few days; no doubt he intends this as his birthday gift. Be sure you do not mention my visit here, and I shall say nothing to the Prince.' The Princess left the jewellers in a high state of elation. She was touched by the thoughtful compliment from her husband, who, in those days, was neither noted for his thoughtfulness or his tenderness, and eagerly awaited her birthday in silence. (If she had only spoken!) The morning came, and numberless cadeaux, according to the German custom, were carried into her bedchamber, among them one that bore her husband's hand-writing on the covering. How odd! This small case would not hold that exquisite necklace! She tore off the wrappings, trembling, almost weeping, and refusing assistance. The little casket contained a very handsome diamond bracelet—no necklace. What could it mean? Like the Queen, the Princess Royal is a martyr to jealous rage, and her fury may be imagined. But to discover what she was determined to learn she must not betray her feelings. She did hide her rage, her anguish, her suspicions, saying to herself: 'A necklace like that would only be a fitting cadeau to some one who goes to court—I shall see it.' And she did. At the next court ball the searching eyes of the Crown Princess did not permit any one to pass unnoticed. At length there entered a young and beautiful lady—a well known belle. She wore that necklace!

The eyes of her Royal Highness flashed as though giving back the light of the diamonds when her glance rested upon it. She walked up to the young lady and asked her, in a tone quite audible to those near, 'Who gave you that necklace?' The lady colored crimson, hesitated, stammered, and failed to reply. 'Who made a present of these eqquisite diamonds?' demanded the Princess, varying her question. The lady, now quite confident from the manner of the Crown Princess, that she knew the donor, and there was no mercy to be expected, stood silent. 'It was given to you by the Crown Prince of Prussia, my husband! Deny it if you dare—but you cannot! I now leave this palace, and I will never more enter it until you have been openly forbidden to do so.' With that she swept out of the saloon. Of course the fair necklace wearer was then and there dismissed in disgrace.

Jenkins on Louis Napoleon.

The ubiquitous Jenkins, who writes of all the world and 'does' the manners of its great personages, has written of Louis Napoleon. He informs us that the 'tastes and habits of Napoleon III. are simple and plain. There is probably no European potentate so little fond of ceremony and ostentation, none more easy and unaffected—nay, almost familiar in his manner. Among the wonderful, and to any one who knows anything of the real life at the Tulleries, incomprehensible stories afloat in the world, the story that Napoleon III. is silent, mysterious, and cautious in his daily intercourse with people about him, is not the least surprising. He is neither a silent nor a haughty man. He talks as much and as freely as any one; his manner is gentle, quiet, undemonstrative, kindly, complaisant—the manner of a thorough man of the world, who understands how 'to take people,' who is a shrewd judge of character, but who dearly likes to throw off the cares of royalty and the perplexities of politics, to sit down with a friend, to roll up a cigarette, and to have a long, pleasant, unrestrained chat. He is not—we speak by the card—a perpetual inquisitor, always trying to find out what other people are thinking and projecting, and keeping a sphinx-like bridle on his own tongue. The truth is almost the exact contrary of this. Many times Napoleon III. has said imprudent, rash things. On more than one occasion, his want of caution has injured his government. Minister Rouher had once to explain away his words in the Chamber, and afterward went to the palace, and delicately hinted to the Emperor that he must hold a stricter watch over his speech.

'There is a little group of gentlemen who are almost always at the palace, the Emperor's chosen families; among them are General Fleury, Marshal Vaillant, and Prince Metternich. It is with these friends that he spends his happiest hours sometimes playing cards or billiards, but more often talking and smoking. Although the imperial table is supplied with the richest luxuries, Napoleon III. is abstemious and cautious, silent at table, and a moderate drinker. He is, however, as is well known, a very great smoker, often pulling a cigarette when riding out, and smoking many cigarettes in succession after each meal. He takes physical exercise at set hours, and on every pleasant afternoon may be seen walking up and down the shady terraces of the Tulleries garden, leaning upon the arm of an aide, and smoking the inevitable cigarette. When the weather is bad, he promenades up and down the long corridor on the first floor of the private end of the palace. He is very fond, too, of reading, especially the current literature of the day—not only the French, but the English and German also.'

The Empress is very different from Napoleon. At the State balls and in gay assemblages, she is in the element in which she most delights. On the contrary, the Emperor upon these occasions always a dissatisfied look—a half-bored expression, and though he interests himself to entertain his guests, he much prefers a side-chat with some dignitary in the corner. The banquets of the Empress are spoken of as being very sumptuous, if we may judge by the following enumeration, for which we have Jenkin's veracious word:

"We are assured that 900 bottles of champagne disappear, 400 of claret, 50 of madeira, 1200 quarts of liquors, 200 of iced coffee, and 900 of chocolate; 2000 ice-creams, 1200 quarts of punch, and any quantity of cakes, pastry, pates de foie gras, chickens, pheasants, partridges, hams, hahs, fish, salads, beef, and bread!"

O Jenkins! how could you have patience to stop and count this all up? Must we add to all our other tributes a tribute to your powers of computation?

A Woman's Dreams.

She sat alone in the moonlight, her beautiful cheek rested upon her hand, so soft and white and dimpled. You could tell, as you looked at her, that her thoughts were far away, and that she was thinking of something beautiful. Her eyes were wistful; her lips were softly pressed together; the dimples in her cheeks had died out, and only the dimple in her chin remained, that little rosy cleft, the impress of Love's finger. She was less glowing than at times, but none the less lovely. I thought to myself, as I looked at her, that she was nearer heaven than we coarser mortals, and I longed to know whither her pure heart turned itself. I approached her; she did not hear me. I spoke; she did not answer.

I touched her softly on the arm; she looked up and smiled, a far away smile, as angel might have given.

"You are thinking very intently" I said.

She answered; "Yes," in a subdued tone of voice, as though that which was on her mind was too holy for discussion. But I persisted.

"Will you tell me what your thoughts were?" I asked.

She shook her head. "You could not understand," she said.

"I could try;" I said humbly; "I am coarse and rude I know, but I could strive to comprehend."

She smiled sweetly, but still with that far away look in her dark eyes.

"No, not coarse," she said, "but you are a man. It is different with men; were you a woman you would understand at once. Now, perhaps, you may smile, may laugh at me."

"Believe me, no, "I whisper; "I adore the beautiful, the true the pure. Let me know your sweet thoughts."

She gave me her hand. "I will telf you," she said, "I have thought of nothing else all day. Last night I lay awake thinking of it, I am sure I must be right; but if I am wrong, oh! if I am wrong, Edgar, I tremble to think of it."

"You cannot be wrong." I said.

She gave me her other hand.

"You think not?" she said; "ah! but you cannot be so good a judge as a woman. I think—I believe—"

"Yes, yes," I whispered, bending near; "yes, Angeline."

"I am almost sure," she said, in accent softer than the ripple of falling water, "almost sure, Edgar, that blue fringe will look better on my new walking suit than purple velvet. Don't you think so?"

Grant owns $1000,000 worth of United States bonds. A foreign war, even with Spain, would greatly depreciate their market value. In all public operations he looks at pecuniary profit to himself and friends. This is evinced by his refusal to run for the Presidency until a subscription paper in his behalf, to recompense his giving up the office of General, had been signed for large amounts by the merchant and bonholding princes of New York. It was evinced by his appointment to office of those who had made him valuable presents and in his selection of all his kindred and those of his wife. The bonds he owns are a guarantee that there will be no foreign war, even to maintain the dignity of the country, under his administration.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

All hope is gone, we apprehended, of the safety of the famous explorer of the wilds of Africa, Dr. Livingstone. It has been a long time since we have had any tidings of him, and he has doubtless fallen a victim at last to the climate or the negro savages of the savage districts he was exploring when last heard from. It is to be hoped that the British relief expedition from Zanibar will not only find him, living or dead, but will also settle the important question which he thought he had solved—the question of the utmost sources of the Nile. If his supposition is correct the length of "the wonderous Nile" in a straight line exceeds half the distance between the equator and the North Pole.

CODIFYING THE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.—Victor C. Barringer, Esq., of Concord, N. C., together with Judge James of Ohio, and Benj. V. Abbott of New York, have been appointed as a new Commission to codify the laws of the United States. We understand the salary to be five thousand a year with stationary, &c.—Observer.

A small boy in South Jersey amused his companions by swallowing pins. It was not long before he was "stuck" in the ground. A "grave" joke.

But they got him back in his cage and all went on as "merry as a marriage bell."

☞ There is a barking boy in Goldsboro. He was bit by a dog some months ago. A friend informs us he stood near him the other day on the piazza of Freeman's Hotel and all at once the boy went "boo woo!" Our friend moved his quarters. He had heard before of this strange nervous derangement of the youth—but didn't give heed to it. We have since seen it quoted in the papers. The thing is certainly so.

☞ Col. John A. Gilmer is a candidate for the Senate from Guilford and Alamance. No truer gentleman, no braver soldier, no better man for promotion, can be before the people for an office than Col. John A. Gilmer, of Greensboro. He is bound to run well even on crutches. While such men as Leach (who did 0 in the war) should be made to limp before the people.

Vance.

We care not what others say Zeb Vance is a man! every inch of him. He says in his letter to the Democrat declining the nomination for the Senate:

"Where there are so many competent and upright citizens, whose eligibility is not disputed, you can have no trouble in securing a candidate."

Come over Here.

We see where there is shortly to arrive in Paris a dwarf about fifty-three having a beard reaching to his feet, but with only one arm and a completely bald head. He possesses 2000,000 Francs and says he is willing to share with any young girl about 20 years old who is pretty and good tempered. If the old gentleman will only step over this way he can take one of "our gals."

Look Sharp!

It is said the bill enforcing the XVth Amendment imposes a fine of $1000 and imprisonment on any man under 'the bann' who accepts an office or place of trust. The Congressional vipers! how they delight in biting the men of the South. The next movement of the radical rascals will probably be one making it a high crime for certain men of the South to put butter on their bread—especially if they opposed secession.

If there be lawless men who have escaped the jail hanging about the woods in this county it is clearly the duty of our officers of the law to scour these woods with a posse of men and arrest them. If it can't be done one day it must another and another and another until it is done. There is no "I can't" about it.

So far as we know our county is in perfect quiet. We wouldn't hesitate—if it were business—to walk all over it. There is but one thing the matter with Orange: We hate to see such an elegant grass country—for dairy farms—going unimproved because of lack of capitalists and men of new ideas to come among us and settle. We tell the stranger he cannot find a more honest and hospitable people in the world; he cannot find a people who delight themselves more in the quiet and plenty of agricultural life; he cannot find a prettier meadow county anywhere in the State; and he may lie down in the woods, if he choose, and sleep with the same security as he would at his own home.

What is a Scallawag?

A scallawag is a low-flung, mean-looking 'cuss' wrapped up in a white man's skin, who thirsteth for an office of some sort as a sheep-killing dog thirsteth for the blood of sheep, and who, to get the negroes to vote him an office, sheds crocodile tears in their presence because he was not born a negro. He pretends to believe the negro the equal of the white race socially, morally, politically and mentally, and hugs and caresses all the carpet-baggers that come along. He is a dirt-eating creature who believes that whatsoever a radical Congress or Legislature does is right, even if they command him to drop his breeches and kiss the hand that flings nine-and-thirty on his hide. To this add an inate disposition for snatching a blind-negroe's last blue-back herring off a grid-iron and you have a scallawag photographed.

☞ Now is the time to subscribe to the Hillsboro Recorder.

Who is Col. Kirk?

We'd like to interview him and find out for ourself. Nobody about here ever saw him. His reputation though as a federal cavalry officer operating during the recent war along the Tennessee border and in the mountains of this State was that of a phrenzied brute rather than of a polite gentleman. We now speak of his reputation and not of the man: for we don't know him; only heard common talk of him after we come home from Appomattox. And that was the talk. It is the talk now. We won't give charges we have heard preferred against him: because we do not know that they are true and beside we are unwilling to inflame the public mind.

But bearing such a reputation among a large class of our people as Col. Kirk does, (even though he doesn't deserve it,) we think it unproductive of peace and good feeling to mount him with sword in hand and march him to put down ruptures between league and kuklux — to restore "peace" — whose reputation itself goes before him at "war" with prejudices that lay now like dead ashes but that need only the name and appearance of this man among them to kindle the more living coals afresh. Still more reprehensible is it to put a chip on Col. Kirk's noddle and "dare" anybody to "harm a hair of his head." This is certainly not the proper way to arrive at unity and harmony among the people.

We don't want anybody to bother Col. Kirk. Let him ride through the State as if he was taking "an evening ride." If we only had the time we'd ride along with Col. Kirk and take charcoal sketches of the green fields and green meadows and the laborers at work in their peaceful calling, but we have'nt the time or the appointment to make the trip and must be denied that pleasure.

"Who killed Senator Stephens?" We reply that the Ku Klux did it, and defy contradiction.
Ral. Standard.

That is an assertion as positive as it is bold and reckless. Perhaps the Standard can tell "who killed Mrs. Stephens?"—Was that, too, the work of "ku klux?"—The family of deceased say it was not—that the old lady, being bed-ridden, rolled out the bed in her sleep, in broad day-light, and her throat falling on an earthen vessel, was cut as smoothly as if done with a razor. But how, we ask, does the Standard know that "ku klux" killed J. W. Stephens? Let the public have the proof, as the Standard seems to "speak by the card." We are neither the friends or sponsors of "ku klux," as our readers well know, but, judging from all the lights before us, we have no idea that "ku klux" had any hand in his murder—if, however, the Standard has proof that they did, why not out with it? Assertion without proof is worth nothing. The Loyal League negroes having—many of them—turned "ku klux," (and it was only last week that Judge Tourgee sent a parcel of negro "ku klux" to the penitentiary, whose villainies, if we mistake not, the Standard at the time of perpetration made a big fuss over as the deeds of white men in disguise,) perhaps the Standard knows a thing or two about their doings, and had reference to negro "ku klux" killing Stephens. It may be so, but marvel not if a scallawag was at the bottom of it.

Meeting at Durhams.

We see that Messrs Gilliam and Rogers intend addressing the people of Orange at Durhams on the 16th of July. They decline a public discussion at the same place and time with James Harris—the negro candidate for Congress. They have a right to do this.

The Standard then announces that a Republican meeting will be held at Durhams on the same day and that James Harris will address the meeting. The republicans have a right to do this. And the people are free to attend either meeting they please—or both if they choose. But we entreat the people of all classes and shades of political thinking to conduct themselves as peaceable and intelligent citizens and to unite in peace and good feeling and law and order in their midst. We tell them—black and white—that everything for the good of us all depends on such behavior.

A Noble Boy.

Baldwin Alexander, of Pulaski, Va., aged 17 years, having been appointed a cadet to the Naval Academy, underwent thorough examination and passed. He made a favorable impression upon the Board of Examiners and the Secretary of the Navy, and his appointment was confirmed; but when asked to take the test path he indignantly refused—asserting that altho' he was a mere child at the beginning of the war, and but 12 years old at its close, his associations, surroundings, etc., had created a sympathy in his mind and heart for those around him; and to swear that he had not sympathized with or countenanced the late "rebellion," (so-called,) would be base perjury, and he scorned to take it.—Noble boy! we admire his pluck.

Hon. Lewis Hanes, the talented Editor of the Old North State, who is a lawyer of profound legal lore, reviews the 14th Amendment and gives it as his opinion that persons banned are not eligible to a seat in the Legislature. And we perceive that the democrats in Congress have issued an address to the Conservatives of the South admonishing them not to elect members to Congress who can't take the test oath, as none such will be allowed to take seats.

It would be well for Conservatives to stop and think whether or not they have put forward any "banned" candidates for Congress. If they have the sooner all such are dropped and candidates brought out who are not under "banns" the better.

Ship-Ahoy!

The Danville Times predicts that Steamers will ere long be running up and down Dan River for a distance of 100 miles. It is surprising to us that they have not been running on that river years gone by. We understand a Steamer will soon be launched to run from Milton.—Maj. W. T. SUTHERLIN, of Danville, has —we learn "put his shoulders to the wheel," and no cause ever fails that this level-headed gentleman espouses.

A Correction.

Editors Recorder—GENTS: The Junior of your firm was at Greensboro and heard my remarks in relation to bringing negroes from South Carolina. Mr. D. F. Caldwell interrupted me in my speech when I told him if they pressed me too hard I would have to go to South Carolina and bring a thousand republicans to help me out. This was said to draw out my old friend Caldwell. It had the desired effect; he jumped to his feet and asked me was I going to use the Company's money to hire these hands? I immediately answered: "Not if he objected to it." That brought down the house. The whole thing was in fun and every body looked on it in that way. I certainly never expected to bring any one from South Carolina or any where else to vote who was not a citizen. I see in the Sentinel of 24th that he charges this as true. The Junior was there and can say how it was. I am in hopes, although politically opposed, he will do me justice in this matter.

Yours Truly, WM. A. SMITH.

The whole thing was understood as mere playful badinage on the part of Smith and was so enjoyed by Conservatives and all. We take pleasure in stating this much for a man who has done us many disinterested kindnesses. We would do so were he the bitterest enemy we've got: for it is but justice. T. C. EVANS.

OXFORD, N. C., June 25, 1870.

Messrs Editors: Please find accompanying this letter a Richmond Whig with several articles marked upon the subject of a Rail Road connecting Richmond with the Coal Fields in Chatham county, N. C. I take this liberty because I see you are interested upon the subject of a Rail Road connection with Hillsboro', and by an examination of the Map you will see that this link between Clarksville and the Gulf in Chatham makes nearly a straight line from Richmond to Charleston, S. C.

* * * * * * * * *

You will discover by reference to the last acts of the General Assembly that a charter was granted for a Rail Road from Townsville near the Virginia line through the County of Granville, the most practicable route to the N. C. Rail Road, and the charter can easily be amended so as to extend to the Gulf by Hillsborough or Durham's.

* * * * * * *

Very respectfully yours,
R. W. LASSITER.

☞ The Whig favors us with its Daily in exchange for our Weekly, but we had not noticed the articles referred to by Mr. LASSITER, which we will copy with pleasure.

We remark that "a straight line from Richmond to Charleston" would effectually cut the throat of the N. C. Central road, the building of which cost our people too dearly to throw it away now that BILLY SMITH is making it pay handsomely. It would be criminal suicide to construct one line to kill another. The Central Road should form a jewel that every North Carolinian will protect and defend with pride and pleasure, and it will pay them for their fostering care so long as such men as Maj. SMITH "run the masheen."

We are not particularly wedded to the scheme of a Road from Hillsborough to South Boston. It seems to us, however, that the route from Durham's to Townsville does not run high enough up to answer the wants of the people. That route would form a parallel line with the Ral. and Gaston Road, with but a few miles dividing them. The farmers more remote from Rail Road facilities, like those in the centre of Orange and much neglected Person and Caswell counties, are the men we wish to see supplied with a 'taste' of R. R. facilities. It should start from this town and strike for Roxborough or Leasburg.

COL. JOHN A. GILMER.—We notice with much pleasure that this gentleman has been nominated for the Senate by the Conservatives of Guilford and Alamance. Mr. Gilmer is a gentleman of fine talents, an amiable and excellent character, and deserves to be very popular, as we suppose he is. He is a man of moderation and possess a well balanced mind, essential qualifications for a legislator in times like the present. We take it for granted that his election is certain.—Old North State.

THE FIRST OF THE SEASON.—We were presented yesterday with a bunch of Tomatoes, seven in number, averaging 10 inches in circumference, and weighing 2¼ pounds. The donor was our most respected friend, enterprising merchant and successful gardener, S. C. Dodson. Come again, Silas—will be happy to meet you at all times, under the same circumstances.

Harper's Bazar.

A SUPPLEMENT containing numerous full-sized patterns of useful articles accompanies the paper every fortnight, and occasionally an elegant Colored Fashion Plate.

HARPER'S BAZAR contains 16 folio pages of the size of HARPER'S WEEKLY, printed on superfine calendered paper, and is published weekly.

Critical Notices of the Press.

HARPER'S BAZAR contains, besides pictures, patterns, &c., a variety of matter of especial use and interest to the family; articles on health, dress, and housekeeping in all its branches; its editorial matter is specially adapted to the circle it is intended to interest and instruct; and it has, besides, good stories and literary matter of merit. It is not surprising that the journal, with such features, has achieved in a short time an immense success; for something of its kind was desired in thousands of families, and its publishers have filled the demand. The young lady who buys a single number of Harper's Bazar is made a subscriber for life.—N. Y. Post.

The Bazar is excellent. Like all the periodicals which the Harpers publish, it is almost ideally well edited, and the class of readers for whom it is intended—the mothers and daughters in average families—cannot but profit by its good sense and good taste, which, we have no doubt, are to-day making very many homes happier than they may have been before the women began taking lessons in personal and household and social management from this good-natured mentor.—The Nation.

It has the merit of being sensible, of conveying instruction, of giving excellent patterns in every department, and of being well stocked with good reading matter.—Watchman and Reflector.

The Hillsborough Recorder.

WEDNESDAY.....JUNE 29, 1870.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

All Quiet.

Orange county is so quiet that a blind man with gold in his pocket and a diamond inside of him needn't be afraid to walk all over it.

The Wheat.

We believe we published about this time last year that there never was seen such a wheat crop before. We now repeat it. And we also published that there were more grains in the heads and the largest grains that were ever known before. We now repeat this too. And we have the authority of some of our best farmers for saying so.

Loud Shouting.

Last Sunday night quite a commotion was raised in certain parts of the town. People ran to their gates asking "what's to pay?" "What's the matter?" And some thought it was a row or a fire but it wasn't. It was just a colored brother who got happy and went to shouting with all his might in the church of our colored friends some two hundred yards up street. He "woke the snakes" for a little while certain.

How to make a Cow come up.

We own a cow—we do—that has never been in the habit of coming home o' evenings. An old negro told the colored man at our house to "sprinkle salt on her back once and awhile and he'd be bound she'd come home then." The man did so and we can testify to her regular habits since then. He says the cow gets a taste of the salt in licking her back and she comes home at night for more. This is a right salty thing but it is so that the cow is behaving herself much better.

Walking in his Sleep.

Mr. N. H. Callum, the popular young Druggist at Company Shops, in a somnambulic condition, walked off the top of a house the other night and falling broke his arm. We are glad it was no worse. Mr. Callum is one of the best practically educated young druggists in the State.

Average Temperature for the Month.

1869, June; Maximum 94°, Minimum 52. Average 75. Rain 12 days.

1870, June to 28th inclusive.
Max. (27th 28th) 93°.
Min. (11th) 56°.
Med. 75°.
Rain 9 days.

Pic-Nic.

They'll never quit picnicking as long as they live. And now there is another one of these things coming off at Company Shops to-day. All the little folk and big too are expected from Greensboro. Hope nobody will get snake bit, or sit down on a "chigger," or entice a lizzard to run up 'em.

F. A. Stagg.

We regret to learn the continued ill health of this worthy Secretary of the N. C. Railroad. He has lately had medical advice from Richmond. Maj. Smith telegraphed to Dr. Harry Bright of Richmond (who has lately returned from Paris) to come to see him and Dr. Bright was with him on Tuesday. His opinion is that Mr. Stagg is sick in no other way than from an overstrain on the brain from his more than faithful compliance with his arduous duties. Dr. Bright left for Richmond the same day—after prescribing. We trust Mr. Stagg will be spared to his State for a long time to come.

Beautiful Freaks of the Needle.

We have on our bulletin board opposite the Recorder office the most beautiful and ingenious handiwork—done with a needle by a lady in England—we ever saw. We received it from an English family in Raleigh who had it sent to them as a keepsake from their friends in the "old fatherland." It is a book mark. A beautiful landscape is worked on it shaded by all the different kinds of silk floss as delicately as if done by an artist's crayon. The landscape is a thatch cottage, the flowers, grass, and trees, and a mother, her two daughters and a little lap dog walking along. Beside this the verses to "Home, sweet Home" are worked with blue and red and green silk floss as if printed in large letters with blue ink. While right above the landscape is the caption "Home sweet Home!" We would like for our ladies, some of whom pride themselves on their needle work, to see and examine this beautiful design. It can be found on the bulletin board opposite our office door.

DR. JOHN WILSON'S SCHOOL.

This accomplished scholar and excellent teacher has opened a School for Boys in the delightful town of Mocksville, N. C., and we cannot too highly commend it to all who have sons or wards to educate.—Nature never moulded a more finished gentleman, and rarely indeed has college turned out a more finished scholar than Dr. John Wilson, who graduated at Chapel Hill some years ago with the very highest honors. We know of no man so befitting the Presidency of the University of this State—with a corps of Professors of his own choice we do not doubt but that Institution would soon rival its palmiest days, when from five to six hundred students walked the campus. (See Dr. Wilson's adv. of his School.)

The Messrs. Wilson are ready to sell country produce either in this market or elsewhere. They are well posted in all the markets. They are laboring for the benefit of the farmers and should be patronised. Let them sell your produce and our word for it you will not regret it

Musical Entertainment.

The commencement concert Thursday evening at the school of the Misses Nash and Miss Kollock was but a delightful continuation of a series of musical treats enjoyed during the past session. The night was star-lit and still and the richly decorated room made festive with gay flowers and bright shining lamps and resplendent with full dress, fashion, gossamer beauty, and "music in the air" made one think of the wedding night of Cupid and Psyche when Apollo played the harp and the Muses sang to it.

The pieces rendered were from the composers; Bissell, Smith, Arditi, Kucken, Mendelssohn, Rossini, Millard, Weber, Lucantoni, Mattie, Gumbert, Herold, Wood, Kucken, Abt, and Quidant. The mise en scene proved the management most excellent for the occasion. Two elegant paintings—Winter Scenes—by Miss Ellers of Wilmington, and two others—one a Marine, and the other a Welch Landscape, by Miss Ella Williams of Raleigh, adorned and beautified the stage. While not the least attractive feature was Professor Lamm who wielded the baton with a skill that pronounced him a chef d'orchestre at the head of his profession. The two pianos on the stage were from the Stieff Manufactory in Baltimore. The two parts opened with a sextet played admirably well by six young misses just budding into their teens.

"Rondo Capprieio" was performed by Mels Feild, of Warren, as a piano solo. A wild fugitive piece from the sublime and music mad Mendelssohn. Played well: an easy fingering and skimming over the keys, as if "the wanton air in twenty sweet forms danc't after her fingers."

Solo, "Fra Diavolo," Miss Ellers of Wilmington. A rattling, brilliant fantasia run off with spontaneous ease and brilliancy.

Piano Duo, two pianos, "Invitation a la Dause," Misses Ellers and Feild, (applause.)

Piano Trio, Overture, "Tancredi," Prof. Lamm, Miss Lilly, of Robeson county, this State, and Miss Edmunds, of Halifax, (Va.) (Great praise!)

Quartette, "Wedding March," from Mendelssohn's 'Midsum'er Night's Dream' played by Misses Ellers, Scales, Williams, and Lilly, with an admirable ensemble.

Miss Scales, of Georgia, was quite happy in the rendering of "Stay gentle morning, stay," a little waif of a song brim full of melodic beauty. This young prima donna is quite a favorite with the music going public. Her voice is a mezzo-soprano and has a sympathetic tone about it that rings out the changes of human feeling and strikes the key natural to the heart.

"One year ago," sung by Miss Feild with pleasing effect. Her entree was a success. The much repose in her singing and her easy unlabored style pronounced her voice a falsetto of much promise.

THE SCHOOL.

This school was established by the Misses Nash and Miss Kollock in 1859. A few facts in regard to it and we are done.

The Misses Nash are the daughters of the late Chief Justice Nash. Their aged mother was spared to them during the early years of the school to watch over and set in order the beginning of their enterprise.

During the whole eleven years of the school there has never been a death or a severe case of sickness. And there have been young ladies from nearly every State in the South.

The daughters of Ex-Gov. Graham and Judge Manly were cultured and trained under the auspices of this school.

During the war the school never suspended once and it was crowded to overflowing. The discipline of the school is most excellent; the manners are exampled after the most refined cast of modesty and truth; and the mind of the young lady is cultivated with the most rigid care. The Professor of Music—C. T. Lamm—has but few peers. Prof. Lamm was born and raised in Sweden. The parents of Jenny Lind then lived on his father's domains. He has frequently played before the King of Sweden as well as for several notables in this country—Mrs. Bennet, of New York, among the number.

This notice is but a simple duty we owe so excellent a school and we hope an educating public may profit by it.

Tobacco in Petersburg.

The highest prices we have heard of during the season, exceeding those obtained in any other market in the State, were realized yesterday at the Exchange, as will appear by the following statement, being for a part of the crop raised by J. W. Dalby, of Granville county, N. C. Sales made by R. A. Young & Bro., commission merchants of this city:

Box No 1—Bought by Messrs. Chieves & Maclin, at $120 per hundred.

Box No. 2—Bought by the same at $92.

Tierce No. 1—Bought by Chas. A. Jackson & Co., at $55.

Tierce No. 2—By the same at $30, (lugs.)

Tierce No 3—By C. W. Spicer, (sun cured) at $37.

Tierce No. 4—By Chieves & Maclin, (sun cured) at $24.

The tierces were all of heavy weights, not less than half a hogshead. We give names of planter, commission merchant, and manufacturers, that no one may have occasion to regard the statement as being loosely made. We take occasion here to repeat what we have several times endeavored to impress on the minds of planters, that tobacco of superior quality always brings high prices, while inferior or common descriptions, one year with another; briefly pay the expenses of cultivation. The above mentioned sales attest in an emphatic manner the high position which this city occupies as a Tobacco market, as well as the liberality of our manufacturers.

Bill Hall.

This negro (arrested and jailed here for an attack on Dr. Montgomery) is still in jail at Danville. He was arrested and put in jail there soon after he broke out of jail here some two months since. If the evidence against this negro be sufficiently strong he should be brought back; if not—let him be turned loose: for there is no use in his staying in jail to no purpose.

From Orange County, we learn that a refugee named Maynor, recently wrote back home to have his crop of grain harvested. Under the notices for hands to reap for Maynor, appeared another notice from the Kukiux, warning all laborers not to cut that grain, and the grain is now rotting in Maynor's field.—Raleigh Standard.

☞ That's unheard of news, boys, in these parts! Who in thunder is this man "Maynor?" Is the Standard sure it has not been hoaxed?

TOWN DIARY.—Hot.
Want a fan.
And a paper shirt.
It is certainly very warm.
But ain't it hot?
It is the warmest weather I ever felt.
Shoo fly!

P. S. We will try and write an article on ice next week.

Matilda May at Church.

From our Caswell Correspondent.

I went to church in town the other Sunday. Won't say what town. It was a mighty good sermon and the organ did me a heap of good! for I love music. I come home and the first question Ma asked was "who did you see?" Well. I saw lots. I saw three dry goods clerks—they'll never be whiter when they are dead—with paper collars choking their throats ogling three school girls who would once and awhile giggle and put their hymn books up to their mouths. I saw a young woman dressed up like a circus horse come in like she was walking on pins and she kneeled down and said her prayers. I saw two old maids with curls and dum fidgits on. I saw four married women with four seedy looking husbands come in leading 8 little children by the hands. These women had dress and hair fixins and jewelry enough on to weigh one hundred pounds and they were fanning themselves with little jeweled fans not bigger than a butter fly's wing. They too kneeled down and said their prayers. While, the seedy looking men all took a "chaw" of tobacco and squared themselves down to enjoy(?) the sermon. I saw an old lady dressed in black with a long flap eared bonnet on and a turkey tail fan in her hand slide into the church and squat herself into the first pew she come to. And I thought; Oh Lord, that I was as good as that old woman! I can't give the text to save my life. What with looking at other folks and thinking about my pretty self! I forgot all about the preacher and his text. I mean to stay at home next Sunday and hear old brother F—— preach in his old clothes and sling through his nose.

ELLISON'S WAREHOUSE.

The Farmers around Milton have "Ellison's Warehouse" on the brain. The prices run so big there and the old hard-working planter is treated so liberally that a common saying is: "That Warehouse can get every stick of Tobacco I put into market." Go it, little Milton! The Steamer's acoming!

JUDGE SHIPP.

It will be seen from the proceedings, which we publish in another column, that the Executive Committee have nominated Hon. Wm. M. Shipp, of Charlotte, as the Conservative candidate for Attorney General. This is, doubtless, the very best nomination that could have been made under all circumstances. Judge Shipp is a gentleman of undoubted ability, of superior legal attainments, a well balanced mind, unquestioned integrity and irreproachable character. He was at college with his distinguished rival and, like him, graduated with the first honors of his class. He is, in every respect, worthy to have been selected as the competitor of Mr. Phillips, and in any event the people of the State have the satisfaction of knowing that they will be served by an able and efficient Attorney General. He is said to possess great popularity in the West and, it is believed, will add strength to our cause in that quarter while being acceptable everywhere else. He does not belong to the school of extreme and violent politicians, but is a very prudent, moderate and safe man under all circumstances. His election seems to be very certain, judging from the signs of the times, and few men are better qualified for the office.

The Old North State.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—During the thunder storm, on Sunday evening last, the chimney of Mr. Rufus Troxler's house was struck by lightning in the western part of the city. Mr. T. and his wife were in the house at the time, and strange to say, although severely stunned, were not personally injured. Mr. T. was sitting in the door, and the hat on his head was badly torn by the electric fluid, yet he escaped bodily harm. The chimney was demolished and a dog killed under the house. A kerosene lamp on the mantle was exploded and it was with some difficulty that the flames were extinguished.—Salisbury Ex.

BE WISE AND STAY AT HOME.—Many of those who have migrated westward under the glowing description of the "chances" out there, and the interested advice of those who have lands to sell and "paper cities" to fill up with inhabitants, are meeting with disappointments. At Humboldt, Kansas, recently, there were nearly a thousand emigrant wagons, filled with distressed women and children, whose husbands and fathers had been induced to abandon their homes on no more substantial grounds than statements of interested parties, and the delusive hope that they could better their condition, without knowing how it was to be done. In Kansas City the wages of labor are lower than at the East, and employment is a boon. So says the New York Times.

FOR THE PLAIN LADIES.—In the list of premiums offered for the June exhibition of the Cobb County Agricultural Society, we find the following:

"Mr. George Sharp, jeweller of Atlanta, Ga., offers the following, to be awarded at the annual fair:

"Silver pitcher, waiter and goblets, valued at $50, to the plainest and neatest dressed lady, introducing a style for Georgia ignoring present fashions. Said premium to be awarded on the first day of the annual fair of Cobb county, held in 1870, and confined exclusively to ladies of Cobb county. Mr. Sharp offered this special premium, believing that present fashions do not conduce to the health, style or beauty of those we love most."

CANDIDATES.

DURHAM'S June 25th 1870.

Messrs Editors of Recorder—Gents: As there seems to be an open field, since Gov. Graham declined to accept the nomination tendered to him by the Convention, and having been solicited by many friends from different parts of the county to allow my name to be announced as a candidate for the Senate, I have consented to do so, subject, to the action of the Executive Committee, should they think proper to make another nomination, which they have failed to do up to this time, so far as I know. I will endeavor to attend at the different tax gatherings in the county and discuss the state of affairs in the County to the best of my ability.

Respectfully, W. W. GUESS.

☞ We are authorized to announce NELSON P. HALL, Esq., a candidate for a seat in the House of Representatives. Election in August.

☞ We are authorized to announce JOHN LAW as a candidate for re-election to the Office of Register of Deeds for Orange county, at the ensuing election to be held the first Thursday in August next.

☞ We are authorized to announce T. M. Anco as a candidate for the Senate of the next Legislature.

☞ We are authorized to announce RICH'D M. JONES, Esq., as a candidate for the Senate in the next Legislature of North Carolina.

To the Citizens of Orange County.

Having received the nomination by the County Convention, held on the 21st inst., I announce myself a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds for this County.

Very Respectfully,
F. NASH.

☞ I hope the late Convention will pardon me for declaring myself a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds, after having been ruled off twice by a convention, I now appeal to the people of Orange for a decison. I do not wish to press myself upon the people, but they shall not say I cut myself out of office any more, I will back for no man or set of men.

Respectfully Yours.
JESSE W. COLE.

POETICAL.

MEASURING THE BABY.

We measured the riotous baby
Against the cottage wall—
A fly grew at the threshold,
And the bee was just as tall!
A royal tiger lily,
With spots of purple and gold,
And a heart like a jeweled chalice,
The fragrant dew to hold.

Without the bluebirds whistled
High up in the old roof-trees,
And to and fro at the window
The red rose rocked her bees;
And the wee, pink fists of the baby
Were never a moment still,
Catching at shine and shadow
That danced on the lattice sill!

His eyes were wide as bluebells—
His mouth like a flower unblown—
Two little bare feet, like funny white mice,
Peeped out from his snowy gown;
And we thought, with a thrill of rapture
That yet had a touch of pain,
When June rolls around with her roses,
We'll measure the boy again.

Ah me! In a darkened chamber,
With the sunshine shut away,
Through tears that fell like a bitter rain,
We measured the boy to-day:
And the little bare feet, that were dimpled
And sweet as a budding rose,
Lay side by side together,
In the hush of a long repose!

Up from the dainty pillow,
White as the risen dawn,
The fair little face lay smiling,
With the light of heaven thereon—
And the dear little hands, like rose leaves
Dropped from a rose, lay still,
Never to snatch at the sunshine
That crept to the shrouded sill!

We measured the sleeping baby
With ribbons white as snow,
For the shining rosewood casket
That waited him below;
And out of the darkened chamber
We went with a childless moan—
To the hight of the sinless angels
Our little one had grown!

While passing a house in Virginia, two drummers observed a very peculiar chimney unfinished, and it attracted their attention, they asked a flaxen-haired urchin standing near the house if it "drawed well," whereupon the aforesaid urchin replied: "Yes, it draws the attention of the d—d fools that pass this road."

PLANTATION BITTERS.

This wonderful vegetable restorative is the sheet-anchor of the feeble and debilitated. As a tonic and cordial for the aged and languid it has no equal among stomachics. As a remedy for the nervous weakness to which women are especially subject, it is superseding every other stimulant. In all climates, tropical, temperate or frigid, it acts as a specific in every species of disorder which undermines the bodily strength and breaks down the animal spirits.

Wherever it is introduced it becomes a standard article—a medicinal staple. It is to-day the best and purest tonic, and the most popular medicine in the civilized world—be sure and get the genuine. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Country Stores.
